A Note from the Artistic Director

Raised through a rhythm of constant departures—between Taipei, New Jersey, New York, and Philadelphia—I learned early on to find grounding in transition. Later, as my performing path unfolded across the globe, that wandering cadence carried me from intimate halls in Savannah and Little Rock to stages across Perth, Berlin, Paris, Shanghai, and Tokyo. To spend years living out of a suitcase as an only child at the piano is to know solitude intimately—a quiet world I long cherished. Yet as my journey unfolded, what ultimately endured went far beyond the private devotion of practice or the fleeting applause. It was the conversations long after the lights dimmed, the shared tables, and the strangers who, through sound, quietly became family.

A few years ago, an unexpected family emergency called me back to Taiwan for three months—the longest stretch I had spent here since childhood. What began as an urgent visit slowly deepened into an enduring dialogue. Traveling through communities across the island, I was drawn to a rare warmth and resonance, realizing that all those nomadic years were never about drifting away, but about gathering the artistry and perspective to build something lasting right here.

Opus Music Festival was founded on that singular impulse: to connect.

Opus

Music possesses the rare alchemy of suspending the relentless noise of our days, aligning mind and breath within the exact same dimension of time and space. It transforms listening into a shared sanctuary. Whether you are a devoted patron whose vision helped bring this festival to life, a steadfast Friend of Opus, someone who first stumbled upon our world through a fleeting screen, or a listener seated quietly in the very back row of the hall tonight—you are an indispensable part of this living canvas.

Thank you for lending your presence, your trust, and your open ears to our inaugural season. May the music we inhabit together over these days offer a rare moment of stillness, resonance, and genuine discovery.
